

Agents of Transformation

Agents of Transformation are elite technologists with the skills, ambition and resources required to drive sustainable innovation.

They've operated at the forefront of their organization's digital transformation programs in recent years.

But the pandemic has completely changed what it means to be a technologist.

84%

of technologists report that the skills and qualities that define an Agent of Transformation have evolved.

66%

believe that it's now more difficult to reach the summit of their profession.

We are now entering the next era of innovation.

83%

of technologists recognize the need for more technologists to step up to become Agents of Transformation.

Modern challenges need modern tools

To achieve their full potential, technologists need new tools to cut through complexity and data noise.

93%

now believe that being able to observe the entire IT stack and directly link technology performance to business outcomes is important for them to operate as Agents of Transformation.

Becoming Agents of Transformation

Reimagining applications to deliver incredible digital experiences has become mission-critical.

The shift to modern application stacks requires focus across in a host of areas to meet customer and employee needs:

Hope for the future

Encouragingly, technologists remain optimistic about the future and are determined to leave a positive legacy.

97%

are excited about the prospect of becoming an Agent of Transformation.

Find out more

Download the 'Agents of Transformation 2022' report

Data References:
All statistics in this infographic are taken from the AppDynamics report 'Agents of Transformation 2022: Innovating in the Experience Economy'.